8 Cookies

Our internet pages use cookies. Cookies are text files that are stored on your computer system via your internet browser. Many internet sites and servers use cookies. A cookie consists of a string of characters that allows internet pages and servers to be assigned to the particular internet browser in which it is stored. This enables the viewed internet site or server to identify the individual browser of the data subject from other internet browsers containing other cookies. The one and only cookie ID can be used to recognise and identify a specific internet browser. By using cookies, the organisation can provide the users of this website with user-friendly services that would not be possible without the cookie setting.

By using cookies, the information and advertising on the corporation's website can be optimised with the user in mind. The purpose of this is to make it easier for users to use our websites. For example, website users who use cookies do not have to enter access data each time they visit the website. This is because cookies are stored on the user's computer system via the website. At any time, the data subject can prevent the setting of cookies through the website of the corporation by means of the corresponding settings of the internet browser used, and can permanently negate the setting of cookies. Furthermore, cookies that have already been set can be deleted at any time via your internet browser or other software programme. This is possible with all common internet browsers. If the data subject deactivates the cookie setting of the internet browser used, not all functions of our website may be fully available.

Cookies.

(1) Classification by duration

- ① Session cookies : Cookies that are deleted when the user closes the browser.
- ② Persistent cookies: Cookies that remain on the user's computer/device for a predefined period of time.

(2) Classification by attribution

- ① First type cookies: cookies that are set by the web server and share the same domain.

- ② Third party cookies: cookies stored by a domain different from the domain of the visited page; these cookies occur when a web page refers to a file, such as JavaScript, located outside its domain.

9 Revisions to this policy

The Corporation may review this Policy from time to time and make changes to it as necessary. However, in the event of a change to this Policy that requires the consent of the person concerned under the law, the changed Policy will only apply to those who have consented to the change in the manner prescribed by the Corporation. If the Corporation changes this Policy, it will make known or notify the individual of the effective date and content of the changed Policy by displaying the revised Policy on the Corporation's website or by other appropriate means.
